Abstract

Background

Next-generation sequencing projects commonly commence by aligning reads to a reference genome assembly. While improvements in alignment algorithms and computational hardware have greatly enhanced the efficiency and accuracy of alignments, a significant percentage of reads often remain unmapped.

Results

We generated de novo assemblies of unmapped reads from the DNA and RNA sequencing of the Bos taurus reference individual and identified the closest matching sequence to each contig by alignment to the NCBI non-redundant nucleotide database using BLAST. As expected, many of these contigs represent vertebrate sequence that is absent, incomplete, or misassembled in the UMD3.1 reference assembly. However, numerous additional contigs represent invertebrate species. Most prominent were several species of Spirurid nematodes and a blood-borne parasite, Babesia bigemina. These species are either not present in the US or are not known to infect taurine cattle and the reference animal appears to have been host to unsequenced sister species.

Writing resources

Welcome to BioMed Central's writing resources, a guide on writing and publishing a scientific manuscript. You can use the links to the left or below to find advice on specific topics.

Overview

Why publish in English?

Because English is the language scientists in different countries use to communicate with each other, publishing in English allows you to reach the broadest possible audience. This will help you achieve the goal that led you to publish in the first place: To add to our understanding of the world by informing other scientists about your research.

Of course, if English is not your first language, having to use it may add to the challenges of writing and publishing.

Why is good writing important?

Good writing is writing that clearly communicates your research. Scientists are busy

Publication Charges

進入同意付款的程序

This journal is an Open Access publication and an article-processing charge (APC) is levied on articles that are accepted for publication by the Editors.

To proceed, please click 'View Publication Charges' which will take you to another window in order to select the relevant payment option.

Once the payment option has been confirmed you will return to this page where you must select the 'Proceed' button below in order to complete your submission.

If your institution, society or other organization is a member, the APC amount may be wholly or partly covered by the membership arrangement. For an article to be eligible for APC coverage through an institutional membership, its submitting author must be affiliated with the member institution.

APC waivers or discounts are granted on a case-by-case basis to authors with no or insufficient funds. Such waivers or discounts can be requested after you have clicked 'View Publication Charges' and a decision will normally be made within two working days.

Submission of the article to the journal can be completed once the payment method has been agreed. Any applicable APC can be paid after editorial acceptance and must be paid prior to publication.

APCs for articles submitted from EU countries are subject to VAT (Value Added Tax). EU customers must supply their VAT Number to be exempt from VAT. UK Customers are not exempt from VAT. If you choose to pay by a method other than by credit card, an administration surcharge will be applied. For more information, see our article processing charge FAQ.

BMC Genomics

Dear Ms Wang

Thank you for your recent submission to BMC Genomics. I would like to update you regarding your status with respect to the article processing charge that is normally due if a manuscript is accepted.

You have agreed to pay an article processing charge of GBP 1,125/USD 1,835/EUR 1,285 if your manuscript is accepted. Since you are based in China, you will be charged the price of GBP 1,125. Submissions from EU countries are subject to VAT at 17.5%.

Payment will become due if your manuscript is accepted for publication by the editors. We allow payment by credit card or invoice. Invoice payments are subject to an administrative charge of £50.00. The article processing charge must be paid before the manuscript will be published.
